

CONTENTS

1	Introduction: Relational Empires	1
	Janne Lahti
 Part I Portabilities
2	Seapower and Frontier Settlement: Friedrich List's American Vision for Germany	17
	Gregor Thum
3	The Fantasy of Open Space on the Frontier: Max Sering from the Great Plains to Eastern Europe	41
	Robert L. Nelson
4	The Role of US Railroads in the German Expansionist Mindset of Gerhard Rohlfs	63
	Tracey Reimann-Dawe
5	Between France, Germany, and the United States: Raymond Aron as a Critical Theorist of Colonialism and Empire	83
	George Steinmetz

Part II Passages

- 6 “A Truly Exquisite Little Phrase:” Global Colonialist Visions vs. The “Drang nach Osten” 109
Jens-Uwe Guettel
- 7 Ruling Classes and Serving Races: German Policies on Land, Labor, and Migration in Trans-Imperial Perspective 129
Dörte Lerp
- 8 How the Südwest Was Won: Transnational Currents of American Agriculture and Land Colonization in German Southwest Africa 153
Jeannette Eileen Jones
- 9 Practicing Empire: Germany’s Colonial Visions in the Pacific Northwest 177
Eriks Bredovskis

Part III Parallels

- 10 Similarity in Appearance—“Chinaman” in German and American Satire Magazines Around 1900 203
Volker M. Langbehn
- 11 “I Almost Pulled Her to My Heart, but...” Competing Masculinities in Karl May’s Wild West Fictions and Their Modern Theatrical Adaptations 229
A. Dana Weber
- 12 In Service of Empires: Apaches and Askaris as Colonial Soldiers 253
Janne Lahti and Michelle R. Moyd

13	Words and Wars of Conquest: The Rhetoric of Annihilation in the American West and the Nazi East	277
	Edward B. Westermann
 Part IV Afterwords
14	Empires of Comparison	301
	Andrew Zimmerman
15	Settler Colonialism and Financial Imperialism: The German and United States Empires in a Global Age	307
	Sebastian Conrad
	Index	315

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Eriks Bredovskis is Ph.D. candidate in the Department of History at the University of Toronto and affiliate with the Collaborative Program at the Anne Tanenbaum Centre for Jewish Studies. Funded by the Canada Graduate Scholarship from SSHRC, his dissertation examines German anxiety about US empire from 1878 to 1918, with a particular interest in Germans in the North Pacific Ocean. His most recent publication is titled “Sketching America: German Depictions of the United States and Woodrow Wilson” in the October 2019 issue of German Studies Review.

Sebastian Conrad is Professor of Global History at the Free University of Berlin. He has a background in both modern Western European and Japanese history and is currently interested primarily in transnational and global history approaches and their contribution to an understanding of the interactions and entanglements of the past. His recent publications include German Colonialism: A Short History (Cambridge University Press, 2012), What is Global History? (Princeton University Press, 2016), and An Emerging Modern World, 1750–1870, eds. with Jürgen Osterhammel, (A History of the World, vol. 4; The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press, 2018).

Jens-Uwe Guettel is Associate Professor of German Studies and History at Penn State. His first book, German Expansionism, Imperial Liberalism, and the United States, 1776–1945 (Cambridge University Press, 2012), focuses on the domestic ramifications of colonial expansion for nineteenth- and early twentieth-century Germany and Nazi expansionism. His current book project, Radical Democracy in Germany, 1871–1918, takes a broad look at women, socialists, anarchists, and a host of other individuals and movements interested in radical change in Germany before 1918. Guettel's articles have appeared, for instance, in the Journal of Modern History, Central European History, and Modern Intellectual History.

Jeannette Eileen Jones is Associate Professor of History and Ethnic Studies at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Her research expertise and interests include Gilded Age and Progressive Era history, transnational history, pre-Colonial Africa, history of science, digital history, Black European Studies, and the Black American West. She is the author of In Search of Brightest Africa: Reimagining the Dark Continent in American Culture, 1884–1936 (The University of Georgia Press, 2010). She is currently working on her second monograph, America in Africa: U.S. Empire, Race, and the African Question, 1821–1919, which is under advanced contract with Yale University Press.

Janne Lahti works as Academy of Finland Research Fellow at the University of Helsinki, Finland. His research focuses on global and transnational histories of settler colonialism, borderlands, the American West, and German and Nordic colonialism. He has authored five books, including Cinematic Settlers: The Settler Colonial World in Film, with Rebecca Weaver-Hightower (Routledge, 2020), The American West and the World: Transnational and Comparative Perspectives (Routledge, 2019), and Wars for Empire: Apaches, the United States, and the Southwest Borderlands (University of Oklahoma Press, 2017). His current book project is titled Global Settler Colonialism: American West and Imperial Germany in the World of Empires.

Volker M. Langbehn is Professor in the German Program at San Francisco State University. His scholarly interests include German Literature from 1700–1820 and from 1890–present, theory of literature, cultural criticism, European and American Colonialism, Visual Studies, and Genocide Studies. His main publications include German Colonialism: Race, Holocaust, and Postwar Germany, with Mohammad Salama (Columbia University Press, 2011) and German Colonialism, Visual Culture, and Modern Memory (Routledge, 2010). Langbehn's current project is titled Precursors to Genocide: European and American Imperialism and Mass Culture from the late 19th Century to 1933.

Dörte Lerp works as postdoctoral researcher at the Free University of Berlin. Her research interests include German and European colonial history, postcolonial memorial culture as well as tourism and development history. Her first monograph, Imperiale Grenzräume. Bevölkerungspolitiken in Deutsch-Südwestafrika und den östlichen Provinzen Preußens 1884–1914 (Campus, 2016), examined colonial policies in German Southwest Africa and the eastern Prussian provinces. Her current project, funded by the German Research Council, investigates how tourism shaped European-African economic and socio-political relations. Her publications also include New Perspectives on the History of Gender and Empire. Comparative and Global Approaches, with Ulrike Lindner (Bloomsbury 2018).

Michelle R. Moyd is Associate Professor of History at Indiana University—Bloomington. She is a historian of eastern Africa, with special interests in the region's history of soldiering and warfare. She is also interested in bringing the experience of nineteenth-century African-American soldiers into a broader analysis of soldiers of empire. Her book, Violent Intermediaries: African Soldiers, Conquest, and Everyday Colonialism in German East Africa, was published by the Ohio University Press in 2014.

Robert L. Nelson is Head of the Department of History at the University of Windsor, Canada. His main areas of research include settler colonial studies, cultural military history, the law of warfare, and food history. His revised Cambridge dissertation appeared in 2011 as German Soldier Newspapers of the First World War (Cambridge University Press). Earlier he published the edited volume Germans, Poland, and Colonial Expansion to the East: 1850 Through the Present (Palgrave, 2009). He is currently working on the biography of Max Sering.

Tracey Reimann-Dawe is Assistant Professor in German at Durham University, UK. Her research interests focus on aspects of German history, literature, and culture from the mid-nineteenth century onwards, including colonialism, travel writing, nationalism, cultural memory, and protest movements. Her publications include "Time and the Other in Nineteenth-Century German Travel Writing," Transfers: Interdisciplinary Journal of Mobility Studies [Special section "Travel Writing and Knowledge Transfer], 2016 and "The British Other on African soil: the rise of nationalism in colonial German travel writing on Africa”, Patterns of Prejudice [Special issue ‘German Nationalist and Colonial Discourse’], 2011.

George Steinmetz is the Charles Tilly Professor of Sociology at the University of Michigan and has been a tenured professor at the University of Chicago and the New School in New York. His main areas are the sociology of empires and states, social theory, and the history and philosophy of the social sciences. His recent publications include “Soziologie und Kolonialismus: Die Beziehung zwischen Wissen und –Politik,” Mittelweg 36 (May 2020), “Scientific Autonomy, Academic Freedom, and Social Research in the United States,” Critical Historical Studies (Fall 2018), and “Sociology and Colonialism in the British and French Empires, 1940–1960s,” Journal of Modern History 89.3 (2017).

Gregor Thum is Associate Professor of History at the University of Pittsburgh. He is a historian of nineteenth- and twentieth-century Central European history with a particular interest in the German borderlands of east central Europe, the history of forced migration, and politics of the past. He is the author of Uprooted: How Breslau Became Wrocław during the Century of Expulsions (Princeton University Press, 2011), editor of Traumland Osten: Deutsche Bilder vom östlichen Europa im 20. Jahrhundert (Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2006) and co-editor of Helpless Imperialists: Imperial Failure, Fear, and Radicalization (Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht, 2013).

A. Dana Weber is Associate Professor of German in the Department of Modern Languages and Linguistics at Florida State University in Tallahassee. Her interdisciplinary research addresses diverse topics including performativity, performance and the uncanny, Karl May festivals, the films of Fritz Lang and Quentin Tarantino, film noir in East Germany, and the German Romantic novella. Dana is the author of Blood Brothers and Peace Pipes: Performing the Wild West in German Festivals (University of Wisconsin Press, 2019), editor of the essay collection Performativity—Life, Stage Screen. Reflections on a Transdisciplinary Concept (LIT Verlag, 2018), and author of several articles.

Edward B. Westermann is Professor of History at Texas A&M University-San Antonio. He has published extensively on the Holocaust and military history, including Hitler’s Ostkrieg and the Indian Wars: Comparing Genocide and Conquest (University of Oklahoma Press, 2016) and Hitler's Police Battalions: Enforcing Racial War in the East (University Press of Kansas, 2005). His newest book, Drunk with Genocide? Drinking Rituals, Masculinity, and Mass Murder in Nazi Germany will be published by Cornell University Press in March 2021.

Andrew Zimmerman is Professor of History at the George Washington University. They are the author of Anthropology and Antihumanism in Imperial Germany (Chicago University Press, 2001) and Alabama in Africa: Booker T. Washington, the German Empire, and the Globalization of the New South (Princeton University Press, 2010). They have also edited Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, The Civil War in the United States (International Publishers, 2016). Their current project is writing a transnational history of the American Civil War.