

Contents

List of figures	ix
List of maps	x
List of tables	xi
Acknowledgements	xii
List of Abbreviations	xiv
A note on translations	xv
Introduction: Zanzibar or the dramatic encounter of imperialism and humanitarianism	1
PART I
The right of visit, the French flag, and the repression of the slave trade in Zanzibar	21
1 The repression of the slave trade: An impossible mission?	23
2 The French flag in the Indian Ocean: Myth or reality?	46
3 Dhows and the Indian Ocean slave trade: International law or imperial politics?	77
PART II
Empire and humanitarian action in Zanzibar: A troublesome relationship	99
4 A British Vice-Admiralty Court in Zanzibar: Sovereignty and imperial interference	101

5	The Bartle Frere mission and the 1873 treaty: Humanitarian or imperial diplomacy?	118
6	The 1889 Zanzibar blockade: An international humanitarian intervention or an apogee of imperialism?	134
PART III
	Zanzibar's contribution to international law and humanitarian operations	151
7	The 1890 Brussels Conference: An apogee of imperial or humanitarian politic?	153
8	The Hague international arbitration: The end of an old controversy?	173
9	Anti-slave trade policies and the 'Cause of Humanity' or the shaping of a new humanitarian intervention theory in international law	193
	Conclusion: abolitionism and humanitarian intervention; 'ugly business behind great words'?	217
	Select bibliography	227
	Index	246